This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

EIGHT years ago, in a Report which was laid before Parliament, I pointed out amongst other things the great practical utility which would result from classifying the books in the Library, and cataloguing them on some of the latest and best approved systems. The former of these undertakings (both of which were authorised in due course) filled up the two recesses which followed; and since its completion I have been busily engaged with the latter.

Of the importance of a good catalogue there can be no doubt. "There is no matter," says an authority on this subject, "connected with the administration of a public library, which can vie in point of importance with the character and condition of its catalogue." But, of the difficulties which surround its construction, no one but those taught by actual experience can have any conception. "It is with catalogues," says Professor Robinson, the librarian of one of the American universities, "as with classifying; the objections to any plan are so numerous and so forcible that nothing but an imperative demand will induce one to undertake it at all."

I did not therefore rush into the work without careful consideration of the different systems which already exist, and of their different degrees of adaptability to the particular collection of books with which I had to deal—from that of Conrad Gesner, which is said to be the first bibliographical system, to that of Melvil Dewey, which is I believe the last; from the broad divisions of the St. Riquier Catalogue to the extreme minuteness which distinguishes that of Schliermacher.

As has been often said, a list of these systems would be as long as Homer's list of ships. There is amongst them every variety of conception, from the most arbitrary and fantastical to the most severely scientific—some, like Eyre's, being formed on Locke's three-fold division of knowledge; others, like that of Denis, the learned librarian of the Imperial Library at Vienna, being based on the words of Solomon: "Wisdom hath builded her house, she hath hewn out her seven pillars"—some aiming at an impossible symmetry, like that of Leclerc, and even that which bears the distinguished name of Daunow—some, like that of Camus, following the order in which a man in a state of nature is supposed to form his impressions of the universe about him; others, like that of Ampère, striving after the encyclopædic and attaining only to the most bewildering confusion. Many more have the germs of a better system; and some of those produced within the last twenty years are immeasurably superior to all that have preceded them.

A little reflection will enable one to see in this diversity of methods two great principles which dispute precedence—the logical and the alphabetical. The logical aims at the systematic and consecutive arrangement of books, in accordance with some theory either of the operations of the mind or of the sequence of surrounding phenomena as they impress themselves upon it. The best classifications which come under this head are founded upon Bacon's well-known survey of all human knowledge, upon the same as modified by D'Alembert, or upon the still further modification made by Laire. Some capital efforts in this direction seem to have Coleridge's classificatory system in view; and others, quite as good, follow to a large extent Lord Lindsay's. But there are serious drawbacks in all catalogues founded on the logical scheme. Even where the nomenclature is not wholly unsuited, as in that of Jeremy Bentham, such classifications are better adapted to the grouping of ideas than to the finding of books. The necessity of mastering a complex philosophical system before you can discover whether the library contains a work on a certain subject, and the difficulty in many cases of applying the system after it has been mastered, will always make catalogues of this sort unpopular with readers. It is true that an ignorant man will be puzzled by any system; but even to a scholar this one presents obstacles of a by no means insignificant kind.

Of the alphabetical scheme—that is, the grouping of works under headings arranged in the order of the alphabet—the first faint notion seems to have suggested itself to an Italian librarian, Fontanini, afterwards Archbishop of Ancyra; but neither he nor those who followed him for a century and a half had any idea of the degree of perfection to which alphabetical catalogues have been brought within recent years, and still less of the further improvements of which it is now evident that they are still susceptible. In the early efforts of this kind, the alphabet was used only as far as it was compatible with certain logical divisions and the subordination of subdivisions, but even this was no small gain. The next step was to make title-entries for all books having any striking word in the title by which they might easily be found; and a little later on it dawned upon bibliographers that subjects might also be entered in the same way, and the elaborate schemes which puzzled so many generations of librarians might be thrown to the winds, or left to those for whom metaphysical puzzles have more attraction than utility and common sense. Albert, in France, in 1847, went still further; and asserted that books have not only a body and soul, but that in the soul should be recognised two elements—the intellectual substance and the literary form.

Here then was the germ of the whole of our modern system as it exists in its most recent developments. The late Sir Anthony Panizzi, Librarian of the British Museum, made the first notable attempt at a subject-index; but neither he nor even Crestadoro, whose catalogue of the Manchester Free Library appeared as late as 1864, could rise above the phraseology of the title-page for their entries: and neither of them realised the full significance of the Frenchman's suggestion. The seed, however, that was scattered was not to be wasted: in the minds of other librarians it has produced the richest results—as some of the latest catalogues in Europe and America so splendidly testify. With the progress of science, the accumulation of books, and the increased demands upon their resources, librarians in various countries seem to have, about the same time, felt similar wants and to have discovered similar means of meeting them. It is now firmly established that alphabetical catalogues are the only ones which fairly answer to the requirements of our time, and that such catalogues are not only the easiest of reference, but can be made to yield the fullest amount of information. This is the kind, therefore, which I have unhesitatingly adopted.

A choice having been made between the two great divisions to which I have referred, there still remained to be decided how much and what kind of information this catalogue should be made to give—whether the arrangement of subjects should be that known as the simple "dictionary" one, the "alphabetico-classed," or the "combined"—and some other minor matters. The result of considerable deliberation is that—while following no system slavishly, but endeavouring to cull from each what was best suited to the object in view—I have made a catalogue of authors, an index of titles, an index of subjects, and a partial index of forms; and that having thrown the whole together into an alphabetical series, the work may be referred to as an ordinary dictionary, and it will answer the following enquiries:—

1. Has the Library such a book by a certain author? Have you "Milton," by Masson? Have you "Fawcett on Political Economy"? 2. What books by a certain author does it contain? What other books by Fawcett have you?	Author Catalogue.
3. Has it a book with a given title? Have you "Max Havelaar"?	Title Index.
4. Has it a certain book on a given subject? Have you a pamphlet on the Shells of Tasmania—I forget the name of the author? 5. What books has it on a given subject? Have you anything on Reformatories? What books have you on Moral Philosophy?	Subject Index.
6. What books has it in a certain class of literature? What poems? What fiction? etc.	Form Index.

7. What essays on a certain class of subjects does it contain?
   What essays on æsthetic subjects?—political, philosophical, military, etc.?
8. What edition of a certain work is in the Library?
9. In how many volumes is it?
10. In what shelf is it to be found?
11. In the case of authors, subjects of memoirs, etc., whose names are not generally known—who were they?
    Who was Nathaniel Greene, of whom I see you have a life?
    Who was Eugène Tenot, who wrote the work on the Coup d'Etat?
12. The collected works of a certain author—what are they principally about?
    What do Count Rumford's works chiefly deal with?
13. In what volume of a given work is a certain article to be found?
    In what volume of De Quincey is the article on Herodotus?
14. In the case of some famous questions in dispute, which side does an author take?
    Which side does Hume take in the controversy with regard to Mary, Queen of Scots? What is Froude's attitude?
15. In the case of various theories concerning a given subject, what is the theory of each of the most important writers referred to?
    Of the Philosophy of History, what is Buckle's theory? What is Draper's?
16. When several authors, editors, etc., have the same names, which of them is the one to whom reference is made in each case?
    Which of the Hazlitts was the editor of Montaigne?
    Which of them translated Guizot's "History of Civilisation"?
    Which Lord Shaftesbury wrote the "Characteristicks"?
17. Who, as far as is known, were the authors of works in the Library published under fictitious names?
    What was the real name of the author of "Switzerland the Pioneer of the Reformation," which bears the pseudonym "Countess Dora d'Istria"?
    Who was H. A. L.—the author of "The Forest and the Field"?
18. What periodicals are in the Library?
19. What British periodicals? American, French, Victorian, etc., etc.?
20. What is the first date it has of a certain periodical?
21. What periodicals have been discontinued? and when have they been discontinued?
22. What almanacs, directories, university calendars, etc., does the Library contain?
23. What are the first dates of such publications? And what are the last of any that have been discontinued?
24. Are there any good articles in any back numbers of the magazines on a certain subject?
    Can you direct me to any on Education?

It might be thought that, after a chart of this kind was drawn out, the rest of the work would be plain sailing. So far, however, is this from being the case, that it is exactly at this point the most serious trials await the patience and the judgment of the cataloguer. Titles, in more cases than people imagine, give a very imperfect—sometimes an altogether misleading—idea of the contents of a book, and frequently no idea at all. The same word occurs in different senses in different books. The cataloguer has to make fresh titles for all those which would be meaningless in a subject-index. He has to group them as conveniently as possible; to subdivide some of his groups where necessary; to make references from many synonymous headings which he thinks might be looked for; to bind together, by references, cognate subjects which are separated by the exigencies of the system. Each book with which he is not previously acquainted has to be examined sufficiently to discover its scope and object; to determine, not only in a general way, what subject it treats of, but sometimes what particular branch of the subject, not infrequently how many different subjects it deals with, and from what point of view each of them is regarded. Books will be found to enter into several groups, according to all these varied circumstances.

Digitized by Google

Then the labour of "analysis," which is the bringing out of the component parts of works under their proper heads, is almost literally endless. "The time consumed in it," says an eminent librarian, Mr. Charles Cutter, of the Boston Athenæum, "is considerable. In properly analysing a single volume it may be necessary to make as much research . . . as would suffice for a whole shelf full of books which require no analysis. But," he adds, "the work pays. The amount of buried matter it reveals is astonishing."

Then again, the gleaning from periodicals—a work closely allied to what is technically called "analysis," though not generally referred to by that name—is quite as productive of valuable results, but is almost equally interminable. It is well known that in the leading magazines of the present day the deepest thinkers and the ablest specialists frequently seek a medium of communication with the public. It is there especially that the first statement of scientific discovery is generally to be met with, and the freshest turn of thought and the most reliable history of opinion are to be found. Moreover, librarians are well aware that an article will often be read when a volume would not be touched, and that a well-written monograph will often give in a short space what could not be got from the study of several volumes. I have endeavoured to select, from the sources alluded to, those articles which seemed to me most permanently valuable, or those which, having appeared in French or American reviews, would be less likely to have attracted attention. Even with such limitations, the references to periodical literature in the following pages amount to several thousands.

If, in explaining the system on which this catalogue is constructed, I have shown some of the labours and difficulties connected with it (and I have not attempted to do more than point out a few of the more prominent ones), my object has not been to draw attention to the time and pains which the present work has cost; but to show that the time it has been in hand, broken as that time has been by other duties, was limited indeed for the accomplishment of such a task. Had I not devoted to it, not only the holidays and evenings of the last five or six years, but not unfrequently even the nights, it could not have been brought to its present degree of completion for a long time yet to come. A catalogue, however, was urgently demanded; and I have spared no pains to supply the want, not only to the best of my ability, but with as little delay on my part as possible.

I hope members will, after they have used it for a short time, discover that, though far from perfection—as every work of the kind is still and probably will for ever be—it is at least a useful and convenient guide, by means of which the Library has been made to show forth its contents and capabilities to an extent that could not be attained in any other way, and so far rendered more practically valuable than it ever was before. Whatever be the defects of the work, I think I may claim for it, taken as a whole, to be the most exhaustive catalogue, for a miscellaneous collection of books of the number here dealt with, that has hitherto been published in any part of the world.

When I tell experts under whose eyes these lines may happen to come, that the whole of the labour fell upon me totally unaided, while performing all the varied duties of a librarian—in which, also, I had no assistance other than manual—that while the work was in progress the doors of the Library were never closed for a single day, and that books were issued without any interruption; when I add that it had to be ready for press at any time during the last four years, though the printing was put off from time to time for want of funds; that many additions and improvements were made while it was actually going through the press; that the type had to be broken up frequently, and that the printers were unaccustomed to work of the kind; they will understand, as no others can, the arduousness of the undertaking—they will more readily excuse its shortcomings—and they will appreciate more fully the measure of success with which it has been attended.

* Privilege of Freedom from Arrest vindicated by 1st Parliament of James I. (1604). Freedom of Speech in Parliament not to be questioned elsewhere, provided in Bill of Rights. Publication of Parliamentary Debates declared a breach of privilege, 1728, 1738. Wilkes denied his privilege in spite of remonstrances by Pitt, 1763. Attempt of Commons to prevent publication of Debates foiled by Alderman Wilkes and the Lord Mayor, 1771. Since then publication of Debates, though still asserted to be a breach of privilege, has gone on with only occasional interruptions. The case Stockdale v. Hansard, which involved a Question of Privilege, began 1837. Bill passed preventing recurrence of difficulty (to the effect that such actions shall be stayed on an affidavit that any paper the subject of such action has been printed by order of Parliament), 1840. Lords threw out Bill abolishing paper duty which had passed Commons and was in technical form a Money Bill, 1860. Whole financial scheme of the Government embodied in one Bill and Lords compelled to pass the abolition of the paper duty, 1861.

PARLIAMENTARY LIBRARY, QUEENSLAND.

RULES.

From the Minutes of the Joint Library Committee.

1. During Recess, the Library shall be open on Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays, and Sundays, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and on Saturdays, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. During Session, the Library shall remain open until 10 p.m., or until the close of any sitting of the Houses which may be prolonged after that hour.

2. The books in the Library are divided into books of general reference, and books which may be lent to Members. The former are not to be removed from the Library, unless they may be required by a Member in the course of debate, or while sitting on Committee. Valuable Illustrated Works, Maps, &c., are not to be removed from the Library.

3. Newspapers shall on no account be taken out of the Library, except for binding purposes, and for reference in the Chambers and Committee Rooms, and no paper shall be removed from its file.

4. The Librarian, or in his absence, the Library Messenger, shall issue volumes to Members, which issue shall be recorded in a book kept for that purpose, and which shall contain the date of the loan and return of the books, and also their condition when returned. The entries of books lent shall be initaled by the Members who borrow them.

5. No Member will be allowed to take more than three volumes at a time—for the reading of which fourteen days will be allowed,—but upon a formal application to the Librarian, a renewal of the loan may be made for seven days longer.

6. If any work be kept by a Member a fortnight beyond the time permitted by the preceding rule, and the ordinary notice has been disregarded, the Librarian shall send a notice in the name of the Committee, requesting that it be returned without further delay, and if the book is not then returned within a reasonable time, it shall be charged to the Member by whom it is so detained.

7. No Quarterly or Monthly Periodical shall be considered within the class of books Members may borrow, until they shall have been upon the Library table for one month. Periodicals, when bound up in volumes, may be considered as books to be issued to Members.

8. In the event of a Member applying for a book, which at the time is in use by another Member, a Memorandum Book shall be kept, in which the name of the required book shall be entered; and the Member making the application shall be the first to obtain the book after its return.

9. Members shall be held responsible for the condition and safe-keeping of volumes standing in their names, and any volume lost or injured must be made good by the Member in whose name it stands.

10. In January of each year, or if the House be then sitting, as soon before or after as is convenient, the Librarian shall take stock of the books in his charge, and report to the Library Committee the condition of the Library, and the number of the books lost or defaced during the past year.

11. The Librarian is required to report to the Library Committee any infringement of the foregoing Rules, or any injury to the books.

D. O'DONOVAN,
Librarian.
